Course Mission Statement and Goals

This course is designed to change the way you look at the world by showing you that so much of our behavior is influenced by the organizations within which we live and work. The course also demonstrates how individual behavior, in turn, influences the structure and culture of organizations. We will trace the history of organizational analysis and apply organizational theory to case examples. We will look at how organizations can improve their effectiveness so that you come away with practical knowledge that you can apply to organizations in your life.

Your Instructor

Is a lawyer and mediator working with various organizations to assist in their development, helping parties to resolve disputes. He holds degrees in sociology, psychology, and law. He has recently worked on dispute resolution protocols for disputes arising in higher education. His interests include social psychology, sociology of law and dispute resolution, organizational analysis and development, and cultural sociology,

I. Values and Ethics

Throughout the course lectures, readings, and assignments, the themes of ethics and organizational effectiveness are discussed. Discussions will focus on the ethical issues in organizational development and reform. Using the case method, the course will present students with ethical dilemmas in organizational management they will be encouraged to resolve. Students will learn ethical and effective management and leadership practices, and organizational dispute resolution methods.

II. Diversity

This course emphasizes the understanding and honoring of diversity. It introduces the content of class, racism, sexism, and ageism, and power imbalance as potential factors affecting organizational development. The course examines both the strengths and weaknesses of the organizational reform movement.

III. Research Based Content

The readings document the extensive empirically-based evidence related to organizational analysis. They also describe the empirical evidence underlying the development of theory and analysis in successful organizational management and leadership.

Letter Grading Criteria:

A+ = 98-100	A = 94-97	A- = 90-93
B+ = 87-89	B = 84-86	B- = 80-83

D+ = 67-69	D = 64-66	D- = 60-63
Below 60 = F

This class adheres strictly to UH's policy on academic dishonesty, and high ethical standards are expected of researchers. I enjoy giving good grades when they are honestly earned, and remember those who are prepared for and actively participate in class discussion. Especially in research, we are all teachers and learners. I will encourage you to reflect, discuss, and write thoughtfully and persuasively on the topics that we address in the course. You have a number of opportunities to obtain the grade you desire in this course. I encourage you to do your best in each of the grading areas:

1. 20 % for participation in Class Discussions and Journals;
2. 30 % for your Individual Final Paper;

3. 25 % for weekly written assignments, and
4. 25 % for your individual Quizzes.

Course Expectations

I expect you to contribute in Weekly Discussions - prepared with your reading done. I may or may not cover material in the text during class, but you will be responsible for it on exams. If you don't understand, ASK. I expect you to take part in class discussion. I expect you to complete all assignments and to turn your journal in promptly. If you are having any problems that affect your work in this class, I need to know about them right away in order to help you.

You are REQUIRED to participate in a Weekly Class Discussions. I expect you to complete each weekly assignment, journal, or quiz by the Sunday each week. This gives me the opportunity to grade your work and have it back to you early in the next week. Each Monday we start the next week's work. I will NOT accept late assignments, quizzes, and journals. You must email me if you have a problem with this in advance of these deadlines!

The course includes reading and work assignments that require your active engagement with the course materials. As a participant, your job is to read the course materials regularly, explore the assigned web resources, share your thoughts with other course participants, and respond to them to create a context for shared learning experiences. You will need to devote about the same amount of time to this online course as you would to a traditional course. Since the class will not be meeting at a scheduled time, you need to work out a time schedule that is best for you. Set aside days that would be good for doing the reading assignments on a regular basis. You will have to keep track of the course schedule so that you can do your assignments in a timely fashion and submit them by the due dates.
