This presentation describes an innovation in a public organization at the local level in Japan. It is at once subtle and dramatic and signals potentially important developments in Japanese society. The talk will cover:

Trends in Decentralization
The importance of community engagement
The impact of public architecture
Opportunities for bureaucratic flexibility
The accountability challenge

Dick Pratt is a Professor in the Public Administration Program. He spent the last year in residence at a university in Japan

Friday, October 26th, 2012
12:00 - 1:30PM
The Friedman Room, Saunders 624