Tourism Impacts West Maui

Join us for an exploration of the ways tourism has transformed West Maui from an agrarian area into one dominated by industrial tourism.

Lance D. Collins is an attorney in private practice on the island of Maui. He also holds a PhD in Political Science from UH Mānoa. He was the compiler and indexer of the 17 volume Proceedings of the Charter Commissions of the County of Maui (1966–2012). His research interests focus on the Philippines, American colonialism in the Pacific, and legal history.

Jonathan Malonzo Dial is a doctoral student and lecturer at UH Mānoa, where he teaches courses on introductory sociology, sociological research methodology, and technology and society. He has lived in Mississippi, the Philippines, and Hawai'i, and is currently pursuing research on political sociology, labor movements, and globalization as he works toward his PhD in Sociology.

Abraham R. Flores, “Abe” is lecturer of Ilokano and Philippine Studies at UH West Oahu and UH Mānoa.

Bianca Kai Isaki holds a doctorate from UH Mānoa in Political Science for her dissertation, A Decolonial Archive: Asian Settler Politics in a Time of Hawaiian Nationhood and graduated summa cum laude from Hawaii's Richardson School of Law. Currently, she runs 78 group—a research corporation whose name references innovations in Native Hawaiian and environmental protections during the 1978 constitutional convention. She also serves on four nonprofit boards, and lectures at the University.

Brian Richardson is a graduate of the Political Science and Philosophy Departments at UH Mānoa as is currently the Director of the Center for Teaching and Learning at Chaminade University in Honolulu. His fields of research include 18th century European exploration in the Pacific, European political philosophy, and information systems in higher education. He has written a book on the voyages of Captain Cook entitled Longitude and Empire: How Captain Cook's Voyages Changed the World.
