PUBA Welcomes Visiting Professor John Langford from the University of Victoria, British Columbia

Date: February 2005

John Langford is a professor in the School of Public Administration at the University of Victoria in Victoria, British Columbia. His areas are public service ethics, public/private partnerships, and change in public organizations. He spent a week in Honolulu in February of 2005 as a visitor to PUBA. While here he gave advice to a capstone group working on public/private partnerships for recycling in Honolulu; met with the faculty to talk about possible connections between the programs; and sat in on classes. His wife, Kate Seabourne, heads the distance learning program at UVic and while here she met with Manoa distance learning officials.

Dick Pratt, left and John Langford, right.